Sex trafficking and prostitution charges

Guilty plea and sentence: In 2022, Maio pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of soliciting prostitution, a misdemeanor. He was sentenced to three months of probation.

John Maio, a former legislator and attorney in New York, faced several legal issues that impacted his professional career. In 2021, he was indicted on felony charges related to an alleged sex trafficking ring in Steuben County, New York. He later pleaded guilty to a reduced misdemeanor charge of soliciting prostitution and was sentenced to three months of probation. This resulted in a professional suspension from practicing law for three years by the New York Supreme Court in 2024.

In a separate federal drug trafficking case dating back to 2000, Maio was stopped by law enforcement in Oklahoma, leading to a federal lawsuit (United States v. Maio) related to a vehicle search uncovering a significant amount of cash.

There was also a legal dispute concerning election petitions in 2021, where a court found Maio's conduct suggested intent to deceive in the filing of Republican designating petitions, invalidating some candidates' petitions.

Following these legal issues, Maio did not seek reelection to the Steuben County legislature in 2023 despite calls for his resignation.

Details of Professional Misconduct and Suspension

- The suspension from law practice was a consequence of the guilty plea to soliciting prostitution and related misconduct linked to sex trafficking charges, leading to a three-year suspension imposed by the New York Supreme Court in 2024.

Outcome of the Federal Drug Case

- The 2000 traffic stop in Oklahoma resulted in a federal case concerning a search of Maio's vehicle and discovery of cash, as documented in United States v. Maio (2001). Full details of conviction outcomes are not specified but indicate a significant case history.

Sex Trafficking Charges

- Maio's indictment in 2021 involved felony charges tied to a sex trafficking ring. He pled guilty to a lesser misdemeanor charge and was sentenced to probation, losing his law license temporarily following the case.

These combined issues greatly affected his political and legal career trajectory.

If more detailed case documents or summaries on specific incidents or court decisions are needed, that can be explored further.[1]

However, there is no specific evidence indicating that he has obtained certification from the NSCA (National Strength and Conditioning Association).[11][12]

His credentials include affiliations with the International Sports Science Association (ISSA) and the International Federation of Bodybuilding (IFBB), highlighting his focus on bodybuilding, martial arts, and holistic fitness coaching. While he operates the MUSUL School of Personal Training and offers extensive personal training services, the available documentation does not explicitly confirm NSCA certification or credentialing.[13][12][11]

If further verification of NSCA certification is needed, it may be advisable to directly contact NSCA or review their official trainer certification directory.
